

Happy Nurses Week from Wolters Kluwer

[VIDEO TRANSCRIPT]

Hello everyone, my name is doctor Anne Dabrow Woods and I'm the Chief Nurse of Wolters Kluwer health learning research and practice. I would like to say happy nurses week to all of my nursing colleagues. This year the theme is a culture of safety. I have been a nurse for over 30 years and health care certainly has changed since the time I started practicing. Today we are faced with potential issues related to alarm fatigue, medication errors, staffing, and quality of care issues. While technology has helped us in many ways, it can also work to our detriment if not implemented and used properly. Wolters Kluwer is working to support you in your pursuit to provide the best care to your patients. This week we are offering multiple opportunities for you to have access to critical information to guide your practice. So look for opportunities through our Lippincott journals program, Lippincott Nursing Center, CE Connection Ovid, and Lippincott Solutions. Providing safe patient care means all nurses and healthcare providers have the right to practice in an environment where safe practice and patient care is the norm. Nurses need to have the courage to speak up when they encounter situations that put themselves and their patients in jeopardy. Wolters Kluwer supports the efforts of all nurses to practice safely and have the best available evidence when and where they need it. I would like to thank all of my nursing colleagues for doing what you do each and every day. You certainly make a difference in more ways than you'll ever know. Happy nurses week.
